

An 8 day old chick.

Melanie Million holds an 8 week old laying hen with Scott Westelaken standing close by.

Jake Iles, Angel Schaap and Mike Helder watch as eggs travel on a conveyor from the layer barn into the packing room. Hens begin to lay eggs when they are about 19 weeks old and are typically kept for about one year.

The GSE team lines up in front of a 12-row corn head attached to a combine harvester.

Lindsay Kay climbs up to inspect the milk inside the bulk tank as farm owner Andre Kroondyk and Aylmer Partners

Bill Luyks and Mike Stover look on.

Janneke Kroondyk (pink shirt) explains the milking process to the team while down in the milking parlour.

Elizabeth Rocheleau visits with her new Holstein friends.

The GSE Team at Crownbrook Farms.

